YESTERDAY'S CONCERTS.

Miss Laura Danziger made her debut in New-York as a planist last evening in the Mendelssohn Glee Club Hall, and immediately established her right to serious consideration as an artist of high purpose, gifted with musical feeling and already ssed of large technical accomplishments. She played a long and taxing programme, in which an played arrangement by Blummer of the overture to one of arrangement by Blummer of the overture to one of Bach's cantatas, Chopin's Sonata Op. 58, Brahms's Rhapsody Op. 119, and Liszt's "Don Juan" fantasie were the principal numbers. Miss Danziger has a sere the plantage of hand and wrist; her tone is large and generally, though not always, beautiful in quality, and her technique is of uncommon fluency and brilliancy-several slips that she made last evening being due obviously to nervousness at the begining being are the performance. Her playing of the Chopin sonata was of admirable balance and poise; the last movement was given with splendid spirit, and the largo was read with not a little insight into its poetical significance. It is upon this side, however, that Miss Danziger's art needs most a further development and ripening, together with something more of refinement and of feeling for delicacy of nuance. Her admirable equipment and her sound musical in-

Her admirable equipment and her sound musical instincts promise much for such a development and for stincts promise much for such a development and for her future as an artist. Miss Danziger was assisted by Mr. Ericsson F. Bushneil, who sang with much taste and with noble voice an air by Gounod and a set of songs by Von Fleilitz. A concert was given last evening in the Metropolitan Opera House for the benefit of the German Press Club of this city. A programme of generous proportions and interesting composition was offered, including solo performances by Miss Gertrude May field, Herr Emil Fischer, Miss Maud Powell, Frau Lehse-Klafsky, Herr August Spanuth and Signor Kaschnenn. Mr. Seidl's Metropolitan Orchestra played the accompaniments and was also heard in played the accompaniments and was also heard in played the accompaniments and was also heard in the overture to "Tannhauser," the "Siegfried Idyll" and the prelude to "Tristan und Isolde." Frau Klafsky adding the "Liebestod" scene to the last mentioned. The audience was small, but heard much good music well performed.

RE-ENTRANCE OF MR. JEFFERSON.

The attention of the public is directed to a pleasant porable occasion which has been assigned for and memorable occasion which has been assigned to next Thursday afternoon at the American Theatre. Mr. Jefferson, who has long been recognized as the foremost comedian of America, will make his re-ene upon the New-York stage, presenting Acres, "The Rivals," and with him will be associated in The Rivais, and with him Mr. W. H. Crane, Mr. Robert Taber, Mr. Joseph Holland, Mr. N. C. Goodwin, Mr. E. M. Holland, Mr. Francis Wilson, Mrs. John Drew, Mrs. Julia Marlowe-Taber and Miss Fanny Rice. The char acters in "The Rivais," when distributed to those perfermers, are, of course, allotted to artists of tried and proved ability. A "star cast" is not necessarily and proved ability. A "star cast" is not necessarily a perfect cast, but, under Mr. Jefferson's wise and exprienced direction, the performance can hardly fail in either symmetry or brilliant effect. Mr. Jefferson's embodiment of Acres has long been famous. He played the part when he was a young man, and he was remarkably happy in it. He resumed it, after long disuse of it, sixteen years ago, when in the full maturity of his powers, and he has lavished upon it every embedilishment that genius could inspire or art apply. The rustle tone of the character suits with his mood, and he is able to make Acres soo only comical, but, in a droll, genial way, sympathetic and even lovable. No finer image of comic perplexity has been presented on the stage in our time. The powerful and brilliant embodiment of Mrs. Malaprop by Mrs. John Drew should certainly be seen by all lovers of dramatic art. Nothing so good will be visible again to this generation of the play-going public.

THEATRICAL INCIDENTS.

Mr. Lewis Morrison will appear at the Columbus Theatre next week in "Faust. Mr. William Gillette will appear at the Empire Theatre next week in "Too Much Johnson." Mr. Herrmann, the magician, now occupies Mr. Palmer's stage, and he presents an agreeable entertainment. Mr. Seabrooke, acting in "The Speculator," will his engagement at the Fifth Avenue Theatre

Miss Fuller, the dancer, who for some mysterious reason is called "La Loie," will perform at the Metropolitian Opera House on Friday evening, making her farewell appearance in America.

MISS THERESA VAUGHN OUT.

THE RESULT OF A QUARREL WITH WILLIE COL-MER OVER THE "STAR" DRESSING-ROOM.

Baltimore, April 29 (Special).—Theresa Vaughn and Willie Collier have had a lively quarrel over the "star" dressing-room at Ford's Opera House, where the "Little Christopher" company is playing week, and as a result Miss Vaughn has left the company. She went to New-York to-day. Willie Collier is the leading man, and he refused to let Miss Vaughn have the "star" dressing-room. Finally, Mr. Collier is said to have refused posi-Finally, Mr. Collier is said to have refused positively to appear any longer in the same company with Miss Vaughn, an example which was quickly followed by numerous other members of the company. Fearing a general strike, Mr. Rice departed to New-York with Miss Vaughn, who is said to have been hysterical over the matter.

Her place will be taken by Miss Bessie Bonehill.
A year ago, when Miss Vaughn was here with "182," she and Richard Harlowe almost came to blows over the same "star" dressing-room. She was then defeated and compelled to take a smaller room.

COMMENT ON VARIOUS TOPICS.

KRUEGER OUTWITS CHAMBERLAIN.

From The Baltimore American. From The Baltimore American.

President Paul Krüger has thus far outwitted Joseph Chamberiain, and the return match will be watched with interest. Mr. Chamberiain has reductantly withdrawn his invitation to the Boer Executive to visit England, after the latter had gracefully declined to make the visit. But the most striking feature of the affair is Krüger's reply. Chamberiain is accounted a shrewd politician, but his Boer antagonist is fully his equal— He scores trains the English Colonial Secretary over and wat again in his letter to him, but he does it so detly that no offence can be reasonably taken, or, at has, manifested.

from The New-York Mail and Express. Santor Wolcott is the ploncer in a course of action which distinguishes the Populist from the parint. He announces to the world that the true line of conduct for free silver advocates at St. Louis is to fight for their convictions in the Committee on Resolutions until the last ditch, as well as upon the floor, if opportunity is afforded; but hat, if defeated, it will become their duty to accept the verdict of the majority and stand by the action of the Republican National Convention.

WEINLEY'S STRENGTH WITH THE PEOPLE.

From The Cincinnati Enquirer. There may be other Republicans as profound as william McKiniey on the tariff subject; others may have been as influential, thoughtful and industrious as he in securing the McKiniey law; Mr. Biaine may have been the author of reciprocity; but there is no other man alive who can, in popular estimation, approach McKinley to-day as the representative man of the protection idea.

UNLIKELY TO LAST.

From The Philadelphia Times. M. Melin's new Cabinet appears strong enough on paper, but he will have extraordinary luck if it do not tumble at the first division in the chamber. The Radical majority of the Deputies, including the Socialists, do not want a Moderate Government, and they will take the first opportunity to turn M. Meline out.

By the will of Marc Antoine Vaisser, which was filed yesterday, an estate of about $20,000, al. in personal property, is distributed. He leaves $1,000, together with his collection of eyeglasses and the general contents of his wardrobe, to the New-York French Hospital, and some pieces of jewelry to his nephew, Victor Podevigne. The remainder of the estate is left to the children of two of his cousins, living in France. E. C. Benedict and Edward Tuck are the executors named in the will.

James W. Potter, whose will was offered for probate yesterday, leaves a small estate entirely to his widow, with the exception of a piece of jewelry, which is to be given to his daughter as a memento. He says, "I desire my body to be cremated. I do not wish my ashes to be saved. I do not wish any ceremony over my body previous to its being cremated." His widow is made the executor of the will.

MAGICIANS LOOKING TOWARD INDIA.

Alexander Herrmann yesterday ended negotiations with a European illusionist by which they commission to India to see the reported marvels of Hindoo magic. The commission will consist of a practical man of science and mechanical engineer, equipped with all the latest contrivances for taking a rapid succession of pictures. It is asserted by some that the stories of wonderful growths of flowers and trees and of the disappearance into nowers and trees and of the disappearance into the air of men and boys are simply impressions made on the minds of speciators by hypnotic influence. The camera, which sees so much more than the human eye, and is not liable to influences, will presumably tell the truth. If any of the Hindoos can really accomplish what it is amerited they can, the commission will have authority to engage them to appear here and in Europe. It may be remarked that the photographing experiment has been tried before, and with great success, so the photographer said.

Two little flower girls, Dorothy Skerrett and Margaret Milne, also attended the bride. A wedding breakfast at the Admiral's home followed the ceremony.

THE ST. PAUL'S DEPARTURE.

A NOTABLE SCENE ON THE PIER WHEN THE VESSEL SAILED.

MANY WELL-KNOWN PERSONS ON BOARD, INCLUD-ING HOWARD GOULD, MISS CLEMMONS, THE DE

RESZKES AND MISS NETHERSOLE-THE LATTER SERVED WITH A SUMMONS.

There was an animated scene yesterday morning on the American Line pier, Fulton-st, and the North River, where the huge steamship St. Paul lay with her mighty engines throbbing-a veritable greyhound of the ocean, seemingly imbued with life and waiting with ill-concealed impatience for the moment when she could slip her leash and start on the race across the Atlantic with her valuable cargo of human lives. Not since she was launched did the fleet American ship carry a larger or more distinguished lot of passengers than she sailed with yesterday. From stem to stern every available accommodation had been secured weeks ago, and the big vessel had not room enough left to accommodate even a stowaway.

THE CROWDED PIER.

The departure of a big liner is always an exciting occasion, but seldom has such a scene been presented as that on the American Line pler when the St. Paul was pulled out into the stream. It was above all, of excitement. People prominent in all walks of life were passengers on the ship. There ere sters from the operatic and theatrical ments, kings of finance, scions of nobility and legal lights. A number of members of the Theosophical Society were also passengers. Fully three thousand passengers' friends were there to wish them "bon voyage," and they came in cabs, in carriages, and in street cars until the great pler was a jam of fashionably dressed and sweltering humanity. So great was the crush that the officers of the steamship had to sound "all ashore" long before the usual time, and even then, so great was the excitement that several persons were carried off on the ship who did not intend to make the voyage. Fortunately, the company's tugboat was at hand, and these unwilling passengers were taken off.

occasion. Every woman wore violets, roses or other flowers, and the tables in the saloon were banked with beautiful floral gifts that must have cost a small fortune. Mme. Calvé and Miss Olga Nethersole were recipients of basket loads of the fragrant by Estelle Johnston, or Estelle Jordan, to recover 10,000 damages. Miss Johnston asserts that Miss Nethersole has infringed upon her rights in playing

OUT IN THE STREAM.

At last it was time to go, the captain was on the bridge, and the steamship seemed to be getting more impatient every moment. The final kiss was snatched, the last embrace given and returned, there were hearty handshakes all around and the great crowd streamed down the four gangways to the pier once more. Lines were cast off, puffing tags pulled the stately steamship out into the stream, and as her prow pointed down the North River her screws began to revolve and she was off. The men ashore and affoat cheered and hurrahed and danced, while the women fluttered their dainty handkerchiefs and cried.

Among those on the pler was Police Commissioner Theodore Roosevelt, who came to see off Mrs. J. West Roosevelt and her children. There were also a large number of people prominent in operatio and theatrical circles, who were there to bid the stars farewell.

When the big ship had passed down the river and was out of sight and sound, the crowd slowly melted away and the vast pler was again left in

WHAT HOWARD GOULD SAID.

Howard Gould was a passenger on the St. Paul. A number of friends came down to see him off. He A number of friends came down to see him off. He did not care to talk to newspaper men and said he would not take the trouble to deny the stories which had been published concerning himself and Miss Katherine Clemmons. He said, "I was not married yesterday," with a decided emphasis on the last word. Miss Clemmons was a passenger on the St. Paul, as The Tribune reporter ascertained from a trustworthy source. She engaged passage about a week ago, but her name was not placed on the list. Miss Clemmons, who came quietly aboard the vessel some time before it sailed, did not show herself on teck before sailing. Several persons who know Miss Clemmons said that after the liner had got out into the stream Miss Clemmons appeared on deck, and, leaning against the port railings, joined her fellow-passengers in waving adieu.

Miss Eva Booth, of the Salvation Army, and her secretary, had engaged passage on the St. Paul, but cancelled the engagement on Tuesday. When the fact became known the vacant berths were quickly taken by two persons who had been unable #### to get accommodations. CARRIED DOWN THE BAY.

The sailing of the popular American steamship caused still one more incident in the day of incidents for that vessel and its passengers. It began at the pier, and ended down the Bay. Just as the longshoremen were preparing to lower away the last gangplank, two breathless men rushed up. Excitedly they declared they were passengers, and were with much grumbling allowed to get aboard. They were Deputy Sherifi Whoriskey and Frederick H. Denman, a lawyer, and they were after one of the St. Paul's passengers. They had an attachment for Joseph G. Pangborn, of Baltimore, for $1,719. in favor of Oscar F. Bresee. They finally found the man and served the paper, which Mr. Pang-born smilingly received. He said he was sorry to have given so much trouble and would look into the matter when he came back from the coronation the matter when he came back from the coronation of the Czar. Mr. Pangborn is going to make some railroad exhibits in Russia. He said the claim was an old disputed matter. The deputy sheriff and the lawyer, in their haste, had apparently forgotten that they were on a steamer bound for Europe, and when well down the Bay scrambled, withexeveral other innocent stowaways, over the side upon the tug Pulver, which had come to their rescue.

SOME OF THE PASSENGERS.

Among the prominent passengers not already mentioned were Count and Countess Jean Edouard d'Aulby, Edouard and Jean de Reszke, Charle and Daniel Frohman, Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, Mrs. Jesse Sel'gman, Mile. Bauermeister, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Selgman, Mile. Bauermeister, Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Howard, G. Creighton Webb, Profes-sor and Mrs. S. F. Clarke, E. C. Dameron, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edmund Dana, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon, Forbes, Mrs. Thomas Gordon Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Hopkins, Barker Gummere Hamili, General W. A. Kobinson, and Baron H. de Speck von Stern-burg, First Secretary of the German Legation at Peking China. Peking, China.

If the St. Paul should chance to sink, with all on losard, on her present voyage, the loss would be be seriously affect, not to say cripple, the American operatic and dramatic stage for a time. She carries a most uncommon burden of artistic responsibility in the way of singers and actors and managers, to say nothing of a writer or two. If anybody who is familiar with the opera season that is just ended will think back over it and consider what it would have been without Mme. Calvé or the two De Reszkes, the truth of these statements will become apparent. Yet these were only a part of the lyrical and dramatic cargo of the ship.

Mine. Calvé gave a last performance of the beloved "Carmen" on Tuesday night, and yesterday morning rode downtown through the weeping populace and went on board the ship. Nobody seems willing yet to say anything definite and clear about what the next opera season is to be like, but Mme. Calvé gave those who talked with her yesterday to understand that she expected to come back, so there is so much consolation. She modestly said that she had made $100,000 this season, and that that was about double what she made the first season that she was here. Such a result was natural, because when she came here first neither her managers nor the Ameri-

Edouard de Reszke said that he and his brother Jean would be at the Metropolitan again next season, and there at once is more assurance that all will be as it should be. They, too, are to have a long rest before then, of course, though they do not yet know where, and they are to sing at Covent Garden. Rosa Olitzka, Guiseppe Cremonial and Miss Sophie Traubmann were other members of the Grand Opera company who sailed on the St. Paul. Miss Olga Nethersole was the most important dramatic star on board. She will have opportunity to compare theories about "Carmen" with Mme. Calvé, for she, too, has made her chief success of the season with a play on this subject. She has been here since autumn, and she is coming back after the election. She, too, declared that she had had a most bleasant and profitable season. When she gets to London she is to play at the Garrick Theatre, and afterward she will fill engagements in Paris and Berlin. Her summer's rest will be on her farm in Norfolk. To complete the St. Paul's list of stage performers. J. H. Ryley, the well-known comic opera singer, should be added. He is going to England to join his wife, who went over to attend to the production in London of her play "Christopher, Jr."

PLANS OF MANAGERS.

The managers, Daniel and Charles Frohman, are on their summer hunting excursions in search of plays. Charles Frohman expects to return some time in July. He has not only to look for plays in England to bring to America, but he has arrange-England to bring to America, but he has arrangements to make for productions of American plays in England. His brother will probably return not far from the same time, also with his trunk full of materials for dramatic experiments at the local laboratories next year. Before coming back, however, he will make a journey on the Continent with Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Howard. They are going only for pleasure and rest, Mr. Howard said.

A goodly representation from the Metropolitan Opera House went a little way along with the ship on a tug. Among these were Henry E. Abbey, Maurice Grau, Anton Seid!, Max Hirsch, Henry McCaren, Ludwig Rubena Richard Peters and William Parry. Caren, Ludiam Parry.
